FROM THE NTM PRESIDENT

CATHY ALLSHOUSE

I had an interesting experience a week or so ago.... I was having lunch with a couple of ladies I had recently met through another social organization. I had known these ladies for only a short while. We were chatting amiably--about books, our families, travel, etc., the usual topics of casual conversation. When I was speaking about books I had read, one stopped me and said, "You seem to read an awful lot, how many books do you have going at a time?" I told her and said my reading goal for this year is 50 and that I participated in book discussion groups. We carried on and later she said, "Your vocabulary is impressive, you really should take the Mensa test." I showed her the membership card in my wallet. She then did the Southern Lady thing and said, "Well, la di dah." I guess she was being sarcastic and I didn't notice. Over my long lifetime, I have experienced some negative reactions when people discover that I AM truly sometimes the smartest one in the room. I NEVER proclaim that, but it usually shows. Have you had similar experiences? I had thought that having a high IQ was more socially acceptable these days, but perhaps not!

These kinds of reactions have always puzzled me because I don't feel particularly special; not supernaturally intelligent. I just feel like ordinary old ME--I don't know anything different. I wonder if it is envy, feelings of inadequacy or what it is that makes people comment negatively. I have been treated as different by other people ever since I was identified with a high IQ at age 3 and a half when I read a book to my preschool peers while we were playing "school". For some reason, the preschool teacher thought that was amazing and phoned my mother, who just shrugged. I also was precocious in the practice of sarcasm, to the point where it got me in trouble in elementary school when my teacher couldn't keep me engaged and asked me to tutor some of the kids who were falling behind. They didn't appreciate that and neither did I. When I sarcastically asked the teacher, "They PAY you for this, don't they?", my smart-alecky mouth got me sent to the principal. All that experience taught me was to keep quiet in class.

I relay these interactions to demonstrate just how much value I have received from participation in Mensa, my natural peer group, where I feel accepted and appreciated. I do hope you all have also experienced many positive experiences and made great friends with your involvement in North Texas Mensa. In my opinion, it's just such a wonderful peer group. I thank you all for your tolerance and encouragement as we walk this quirky road together. Do you ever feel like you have to hide your intellect? Please join us for one of the many fun gatherings in April. Check out our April calendar that lists the many activities scheduled for us to enjoy, the general meeting on the 18th, the many SIGs and dining groups and especially the Meadows art museum tour on April 16th for a docent-led FREE tour (see pg 10).

IN MEMORIAM:
CAROL HILSON 1944—2026

Carol Hilson was a long-time member and invaluable part of the North Texas Mensa family. The consummate "Gatherings Queen", Carol chaired and co-chaired multiple Regional Gatherings in addition to serving on many RG committees in other positions. She chaired or co-chaired three national Annual Gatherings, setting a record.

Those that knew her best say she would want everyone to know that Mensa was so very important to her--it became the place where she could be herself, not the shy little girl who sat in the corner and made good grades. Besides her kids, Mensa—with the AGs and RGs—were some of her proudest moments and where she made such wonderful friends.

Carol was a warm, caring, down-to-earth woman and a true friend. She will be missed.

GIFTED YOUTH CORNER

by Bill Rock

Our February event had a nice group getting on line to play "virtual" board games. The Martians mostly defeated the death rays, and I think it was a split decision between the saboteurs wrecking the tunnels and miners trying to get to the gold and gems.

For April, we are taking advantage of the nice weather to go check out the Blackland Prairie Raptor Center, who gave a great presentation at the RG a couple of years ago. Among the activities are a live raptor program and a guided trail walk on the 66-acre center.

The Mensa Foundation has a couple of programs that are great ways to expand your outlook and learn new things. The Excellence In Reading program rewards those who take on the challenge of exploring classic and modern literature. Some of them have already been read for the monthly Book Club, so I'm pretty sure that no one is starting from "scratch" with the lists. The Excellence in Science program provides a structured way to look at various aspects of science and the natural world. You get a t-shirt and certificate when you complete a set of activities, but more importantly, you also get experiences that last a lifetime. Do I still recall smelting galena into lead over 50 years ago? You bet. Same goes for reading "Beautiful Joe".

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! The following NTMers add another candle to the cake in April:

Some MADEATerS are nodding their heads because they've been to Fortunate Son. And we're going back this month, so join us and you can be a nodder, too.
In addition to pizza, Fortunate Son also serves Italian pastas, entrees, salads and desserts. (Ooh! Cannoli or tiramisu?* The struggle is real.) And there are delicious options for vegetarians. If you have trouble finding a parking space on the street, there is a parking garage a block to the east and a bit north of the restaurant.
If you've been around a while, you know the drill. MADEATS optimistically requests but does not require your RSVP. Without one, though, you may not be able to sit at the cool kids table.

2:30 PM Theodore Talk: " Saima Malik-Moraleda: Language Processing in the Brain Across Diverse Languages and Speakers ".
A staggering 7,000 languages are spoken and signed worldwide, and most people speak two or more. Yet, neuroscience research has largely focused on monolingual speakers of just a few dozen languages, leaving our understanding of the language system incomplete and potentially biased. In this talk, Saima Malik-Moraleda, who received her PhD in Neurobiology and Behavior from Harvard University, will present a more comprehensive view of how the brain processes language by examining both diverse languages and diverse speaker populations using precision fMRI.
Register for this presentation at https://tinyurl.com/bdebzznn
Even if you can't attend the live Theodore Talk, as long as you register in advance you will receive a link to the Zoom recording. All Theodore Talks have Closed Captioning enabled, and this year we are offering Translated Captions as well.
